DETAILED ACTION

1. This action is responsive to RCE/Amendment received on 4/10/2006.

Response to Arguments

2. Applicant's arguments filed on 4/10/2006 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

The Applicant argued that the cited art does not disclose added limitation of "a session aware switch" However, in addition to 'response to arguments' in the previous Office action (1/10/2006) the Examiner maintains that the switching device 50 of the cited art reads on the newly amended switch. The Examiner could not find specific disclosure in the Specification supporting the argument that the session memory claimed herein is unique and distinct from cited art.

In conclusion, claims 1-17, 19-22 remain rejected as below:

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 1-17, 19-22 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Michels et al. (US 6,161,144).

Claims 1, 2, 12 and 17. Michels et al. ('Michels' hereinafter) disclose a network switching device 50 (figure 3), receiving network frames and passing the frames to the plurality of search engines 66... (search resources). The search engines determine ports for frames (see fig. 5, also see col. 1, lines 55-61) and transmit the search response, based on the packet request, to the forwarding ports. Michels further discloses primary memory 58 coupled to the switch. The memory 58 (session storage device) has lookup table used to locate iterations of the search, which in turn enable the switch to allow a session to be maintained across multiple packets (see figure 3 and col. 5, lines 26-37).

Michels does not specifically disclose a parser generating packet search request. However, as one of ordinary skill in the art would realize that any router, switch or network (see figure 3) can be utilized for generating and forwarding a search request via media interface 56 (fig.3).

Claims 3 and 4 Michels further discloses that media interface 56 reformats the frames in response to modification request from the network (see col. 4, lines 46-65).

Claims 5-6. Michels discloses a management processor coupled to search engines that maintains the lookup table in memories 58, 70 (fig.3) wherein search, by search engine, is performed depending on entries in the lookup table (shortest queue).

As to claim 6, already discussed that the media interface 56 allows the search engine to transmit the modified frames to particular network depending on decision logic 72 (col. 6, lines 29-57).

Art Unit: 2616

Claim 7. All the limitations, including packet resources (network) are already discussed in the rejection of claim1 above.

Claims 8, 10, 11, 13, 15, 16, 19, 21 and 22. Michels discloses that requests are made for packet search and to reformat or modify the packet based on search (see rejection of claims 3 and 4). A request to modify is inherent. Further, media interface 56 can functionally be considered as session device sending group of packets that are transmitted to another device or computer in the network (see col. 4, lines 58-65)

Claim 9. Network receiving packets via media interface 56 is already discussed in the rejection of claim1 above.

Claim 14. As discussed above forwarding decision logic 72 (fig.3) receives packet response form search engine (second means) and forwards the frames to the requested ports (see col. 6, lines 20-28).

Claim 20. As discussed in the rejection of claim 1 above, the network switching device 50, disclosed by Michels, is used to transmit the packet response from the packet resource to the network (see figure 5).
